FASHION DESIGN

INTRO

Drop culture is most frequently applied to fashion brands that utilize drops to distribute their goods. These companies also tend to have a loyal, passionate consumer base surrounding them, such as Supreme, Nike, Yeezy, and designer brands like Gucci.

What's more, it's bringing renewed enthusiasm to the retail space (both offline and on) and is making a profound impact on retail by generating audiences of raving fans excited to snatch up these special edition items. Limited drops are data points for a product roadmap.

They allow brands to test emerging trends and gather feedback from customers on products and qualities that might eventually warrant inclusion in their core lineup.

BRIEF

Candidates are asked to select an internationally established fashion designer and design a "drop fashion collection". The Drop collection (four garments) will have to show the identity of the selected fashion designer his/her aesthetic language and will be addressed to a younger target (generation z). In the development of their collection, they should take in consideration the need for the sustainable challenge: highlighting some of the various features of "Fashion responsibility" from eco- fabrics to craftsmanship, from labour exploitation to zero waste production, from up-cycling to circular economy. Candidates must support their project with consistent visual research, illustrating the inspirations of the collection and the design development process, including sketches, illustrations and final line up. Candidates can also decide to submit the drop collection developing NFTs in CLO3d.

AUDIENCE

The competition is open to candidates who have a first-level academic degree and/or strong background and experience in the field of Fashion Design who wish to take their careers to the next level.

PROGRAMME DESCRIPTION

The Master's Programme in Fashion Design brings students into direct contact with the fashion design industry in Italy and abroad. Students will have the rare and exciting opportunity to develop their own original, compelling fashion collection under the guidance of industry professionals.

Through theoretical studies and project experiences, students will develop an individual mode of expression, explore the cultural factors that influence fashion trends, learn the ins and outs of production, and create innovative solutions.

Besides honing the "problem solving" skills that every fashion designer needs, students will also develop a "problem defining" approach: the ability to delineate the parameters of each challenge. As students learn to follow their intuition and promote their aesthetic vision within those parameters, they will become more aware of the reasons behind their own fashion design choices and those of others.
